

WILL REACH OUT FOR MORE TRADE

New Railway Lines Will Bring Business Which Could Not Be Had Heretofore.

CHAMBER ALIVE TO CHANGE

Another Plan of Way Is to Have Out-of-State Merchants Come Here to Buy.

With the early completion of the Northern Neck Railway and the extension of the Seven Pines Line to Upperville, how near the Chamber of Commerce will come into operation plans for the extension of Richmond's business influence into the territory thus opening up to it. These districts trade largely now with Baltimore, that market, pending the construction of the new lines, being the most accessible.

Plans as far as they have taken definite shape contemplate the creation of a new bureau of the Chamber of Commerce which will concern itself actively with familiarizing the territory which forms Richmond's natural sphere of influence with the city's advantages as a market in which to buy and in which to sell. The proposition will not be confined alone to the district served by the Northern Neck and Urbanna railroads, but will include all of the State of Virginia, as well as the accessible sections of North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia.

Will Entertain Merchants.
The campaign of publicity which was fully organized will be undertaken by the combined business interests of the city under the direction of the new chamber bureau. The plan contemplates also entertainment for that purpose, will include advertising in the local papers of the sections sought to be reached. The plan contemplates also entertainment for that purpose, will include advertising in the local papers of the sections sought to be reached.

This new plan is to be distinguished from the one which is in force all the year around by which merchants are invited to the market in which to buy and in which to sell. The plan contemplates also entertainment for that purpose, will include advertising in the local papers of the sections sought to be reached.

Work Needed at Home.
While it is the purpose to advertise Richmond in the nearby States, and Mr. Dabney, much work of this kind must first be done in Virginia. It is a fact that many sections of the State are at present doing their business in other markets under the impression that Richmond cannot or does not offer the same advantages. The chamber, said Mr. Dabney, will direct its energies first to familiarizing the citizens of the State with Richmond's advantages as a market and then reach out into more distant territory.

of the citizens of Richmond will be continued. The chamber will lend its influence to public celebrations of the kind held on January 2 last, when the whole city turned out to cheer Richmond's industrial and commercial army.

CUTCHIN UNSEATED BY HIGHEST COURT

Mayor of Roanoke, Removed After Trial, Loses Again on Appeal.

MAY GO INTO THE PRIMARY

All Members of Supreme Court Agree on Opinion in Famous Case.

JOEL H. CUTCHIN.

Sustaining every ruling of the Corporation Court of the city of Roanoke in the recent trial of Mayor Joel H. Cutchin, the Supreme Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the order of the lower court removing Mayor Cutchin from office for malfeasance, misfeasance and gross neglect of official duty. The order takes effect at once, and dating from yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, when the decision was announced, Sylvester B. Seifert, president of the Board of Aldermen, is the acting Mayor of Roanoke for the unexpired term. Reports from Roanoke indicate that Mayor Cutchin will appeal to the people in the spring election for vindication.

A special grand jury of the Corporation Court of the city of Roanoke on March 28, 1912, reported to the court that certain evidence of scandalous character had come before it tending to show malfeasance, misfeasance and gross neglect of official duty on the part of the Mayor, who was accorded a trial, beginning Monday, April 24. The trial lasted for several weeks, and was hotly contested at every point.

Character of Charges.
The original charges were numerous, embracing conduct with reference to gambling houses, refusal to investigate the alleged misconduct of police officers, arbitrary orders removing persons from office, and other matters, and many other counts. The charges were later reduced to four counts, all having to do with his having unlawfully, wilfully and corruptly encouraged and conspired in the keeping of certain places of public amusement, character, Judge J. M. Mullen, of Petersburg, presided at the trial, at which much evidence of a scandalous and unprintable nature affecting the personal character of the late Mayor was introduced, and the jury rendered a verdict finding him guilty on all four counts. The opinion is handed down by the court as a whole, and sustains the lower court on each point to which exceptions were noted.

REFUTES CHARGE OF INSINCERITY

Dr. Nitobe Corrects Misconceptions About People of His Nation.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Charlottesville, Va., March 28.—Several more misconceptions about the Japanese were corrected by Dr. Nitobe, the eloquent exchange professor, in his lecture at the University of Virginia last night on "The Moral Ideals and Means of the Japanese." He emphatically and wittily refuted the charge that as a rule the Japanese are insincere. He said he had many times heard this charge made against his countrymen, and he wished to deny it. He has in origin, he said, doubtless, in the Japanese smile, and he proceeded to discuss the psychology of that smile.

A man or woman in the throes of the most intense sorrow or pain, he said, would smile, and to all appearances that person would be in rather a happy frame of mind. If you should ask a Japanese who was in deep grief, he said, "how things were with him, he would smile and say, 'Oh, all right.' If he had just lost by death a relative or dear friend, and he had occasion to tell you about it, he would smile as he did so. But if you should ask him closely you would note that, as usual appearances to the contrary, he was undergoing profound emotion."

This characteristic of his people, he thought, was largely responsible for the accusation of insincerity. And speaking of insincerity, he said the Japanese were often accused of being "a nation of liars" largely because of this very misunderstood habit of not permitting their lips to convey to the outside world the true state of their emotions. In America, he said, there are the "white lie" and the "black lie," but in Japan there is only one, the "red lie." To balance the comparison, he coined a new one—the "yellow lie"—which he suggested might correspond to what in America is known as the white variety, with this difference: The yellow lie never stains, but the white lie often does.

Dr. Nitobe extolled filial love as one of the highest moral attributes of his people. "It means more than merely to obey your parents or to provide for them," he said. "It means in addition to that an almost inspired desire to effect their happiness and welfare, to act in such a manner as to bring added honor and dignity to one's family."

He put filial love in a broader light, and in amplifying this point he cited what he termed as "Oriental version of a biblical narrative." "Christians," he said, "put emotional love next and respect for historical tradition to the love of God—Adam and Eve first, and then their children—so that, being regarded in this respect, must be given to the love of husband and wife, and

PRACTICAL JOKE CAUSES ARRESTS

Sheriff Takes Men in Custody, Thinking They Are Carroll County Outlaws.

Fredricksburg, Va., March 28.—Wednesday afternoon Sheriff R. C. L. Moncreux was called up at his home in Stafford county, over the telephone from Brooke station, by a party who stated to him that Sidney Allen and another one of the Carroll county outlaws had been seen to pass Brooke walking the railroad track going north, and advised him to arrange to head them off, arrest them and secure the big reward that was offered for their capture. After a consultation with the Sheriff, Moncreux, after arming himself, secured a companion, and together they went on horseback to Widewater, a station north of Brooke, to intercept the parties. Arriving at Widewater, he told some of the men there of his mission and asked their aid, but the announcement created a sensation and a wild stampede. Several, however, among them A. J. Pyke, secured rifles and were ready to assist the sheriff in his laudable undertaking of trying to arrest two of the most dangerous outlaws of the State.

The two men were soon seen coming up the railroad track, and Sheriff Moncreux and his armed assistants concealed themselves behind the station buildings until they arrived. Sheriff Moncreux then stepped from behind the building and leveled his gun at the two men and called on them to drop up their hands. They did so without hesitation, and the men were captured without a struggle and without the necessity of firing a shot. The men were handcuffed, brought to this city last night, and incarcerated in the jail here. This morning City Sergeant J. C. Chichester searched the men and soon found by letters, etc., on their person that either a practical joke had been attempted, or the party who supposed the two men to be of the Allen family, had been in a misadventure. The men were to-day released, and again took up their tramp towards the national capital.

It turns out that three men were tramping the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad from Richmond, going to Washington. They had a member of the faculty of the University of Virginia with them, and the three of the men, whose name he said to be Samuel Gaylor, left the other two men and went ahead. When he reached Brooke he inquired for an officer, and was told that none was there, but that he could communicate with the sheriff by phone, which he did. Above stated. This man then concealed himself at Brooke until the two men passed the station, and after they had gone he jumped a passing freight train, which went by Widewater while Sheriff Moncreux had the two men there under arrest, waiting for a train to bring them to Fredricksburg, but he was not seen at the time. These facts developed later.

Professor Hugh S. Bird, superintendent of the public schools in this city, yesterday delivered an address before the Fredericksburg State Normal School, delivered an address last evening before the Civic Betterment League, an organization of women, on the subject, "Fredricksburg's Juvenile Problems." The address treated of the youth of Fredricksburg, giving much information as to their proper rearing and education.

Professor Hugh S. Bird, of this city, will address the Teachers' Association of Hanover county at Ashland Friday morning, and will go from there to Burkeville, where on Friday night he will deliver the address of dedication for the new Agricultural High School which has just been completed at that place at a cost of $20,000. Governor Mann and others will also speak on the same occasion.

Frank Tyler, E. L. Peyton, William Robinson, J. S. Burke and others started a red fox on Captain Vance's farm, near this city, yesterday, and had a splendid chase with the hounds, lasting over two hours, winding up at Moss Neck, twenty miles below this city, in Caroline county.

Judge R. H. L. Chichester has been indisposed for several days at his home near this city, in Stafford county, but is reported to be improving.
